The rest of the world is now starting to recognise what's been overwhelmingly obvious for 400+ years. Such a realisation is both infuriatingly late, and right on time (although I feel it's more of the former). Nevertheless, despite my mixed feelings, I clutch to a glimmer of hope when I reflect on the remarkable people in my life (both personally and generally). Their courage, intellect and perseverance in spite of impossible circumstances are what keeps me going. I want you to know that while I have not been overly vocal on Scribble Ink social media channels this week, I have been far from quiet. The glass ceiling hovering over creative industries will be smashed for future generations. Despite how tiring and uncertain things may seem - as my people have seen false hope and empty promises so many times before - we have to keep going. Keep going xx
